now it will be too late for it to prevent serious loss.

The corn crop is a large one, and in many instances it is badly in the grass. Many men have abandoned all idea of giving the crop a last working, "laying it by," as it is termed, and will have to see it do its best with what it already has, so rapid has been its growth, and so constant has the rain been. Haying has also been sadly interfered with, and in many meadows your correspondent sees the grass as it fell from the mover two weeks ago, or uncut, dried and worthless as it stands.

ROBT. H. LEATH FOUND DEAD

The Body Found on the Sidewalk Near Home of His Friends.

PETERSBURG, VA., July 17 .- Mr. Ro bert H. Leath, of Richmond, was found dead in Byrne Street early this morning, his body lying on the sidewalk a short distance from the residence of his friend J. Colin Neal, where he took supper Sun day night, as usual, but complained of feeling badly.

Apoplexy or heart disease was adjudged the cause of death, and the coroner considered an inquest unnecessary. It had long been Mr. Leath's custom to spend Sunday evening in Petersburg with Mr. Neal and his family, who were old friends. He left the house about half past eleven o'clock Sunday night, and was not seen again alive.

Mr. Leath was twenty-six years old, and had been for several years a clerk in Julian W. Tyler's clothing store in Richmond.
